Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 21 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
A wet night, becoming drier through Monday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Remaining cloudy through the evening and overnight, with persistent and occasionally heavy rain across much of the region. Far northern areas will see the best of any drier spells. Mild, with light winds. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Monday:
Rain will clear through the morning, leaving a dry afternoon with sunny spells. Becoming wet and windy overnight. Feeling mild, with light winds during the day. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Turning wet and windy on Tuesday with coastal gales, especially in the north of the region. More of the same on Wednesday, then sunshine and showers on Thursday. Mild throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.